

In the ASEAN markets, the Honda Jazz is available with LED headlamps. But the Jazz sold in India has plain halogen lamps. Now an aftermarket outfit are offering fancy LED lighting for the Indian car. Called Customlights, the supplier are providing headlamps with a bold wraparound white LED DRL and ice cube-optic LED low and high beam contributors. The lamps also feature an American-style amber side retro-reflector. LED taillamps are available from Customlights, as well. Little is known about the quality or performance of the new lamps, but their availability does demonstrate that to one degree or another, the aftermarket will soon cater widely for those who own cars not originally offered with LED lighting technology.
