3-D printing and bionics find new application in what could be the headlamp of the year 2025. A company called Edag has produced a combination of materials and processes that make possible the additive manufacturing of a compete headlamp, except for the reflectors. In the GenLight project, the LED cooling capacity is increased with bionic heat sinks.